Senate President Helene Ossipov

I am happy to report that the University Senate committees are 100% functional. Committee chairpersons, and their members, are currently engaged in governance and policy related discussions that represent the faculty and academic professional perspective here at ASU. It is important to also note, the Senate relies on each member of the Academic Assembly to effectively execute its governance role. If you have a shared governance issue/ topic that you believe should be reviewed by one of the Senate committees, please provide that request to either your unit senator, or your campus president. Working together we can ensure that ASU continues to be one of the top universities in the world!

Did You Know?

Faculty members are currently able to teach courses in one of the six approved instruction modes.

- pCourse (personalized learning course): all instruction is personalized using Internet based technology; may be taught in multiple learning environments. Faculty members have regular, on-campus office hours posted on the syllabus.

- iCourse: All components delivered via the Internet to students enrolled in campus-based programs. Faculty members have regular, on-campus office hours posted on the syllabus.

- iaCourse (icourse with in-person assessment): all components delivered via the Internet, except mandatory face-to-face assessments, to students enrolled in campus-based programs. Faculty members have regular, on-campus office hours posted on the syllabus.

- oCourse: all components delivered via the Internet to students enrolled in ASU Online. No face to face components are allowed. Faculty members have regular online office hours posted on the syllabus.

- Face-to-Face Course: meets on a regular weekly schedule in a physical classroom with students enrolled in campus-based programs. Course may include Internet delivered components, which do not significantly alter the regular in-class schedule. Faculty members have regular, on-campus office hours posted on the syllabus.

- Hybrid Course: Taught using both face-to-face and Internet-delivered components, where the Internet-delivered components result in a reduction in regularly scheduled face-to-face meeting times. A hybrid class balances the components, with between 33% and 66% of the course activities occurring in a face-to-face context. Faculty members have regular, on-campus office hours posted on the syllabus.
