Senate President Brenda Hosley

At Senate meeting #6 on February 22, 2016 the Senate approved motion 2016-29 that recommends the Research and Creative Activities committee be converted to a University Senate standing committee. The passage of this motion, and its subsequent implementation, is a positive reflection on the importance of shared governance at ASU. In addition to providing important faculty feedback in the areas of research and research policy, the Senate is well positioned to provide consultative feedback to all of its stakeholders through the continued involvement of our highly engaged faculty members and APs that participate on the University Senate.

Please know that as we help advance ASU into the future, the University Senate and all of its 115+ voting members and staff continue to work daily to help represent the faculty and academic professional perspective.

Elections

There are three types of elections going on during the spring semester

Unit level elections for senators: this is an extremely important election since Senate, unit level, representation is the core of the shared governance concept here at ASU. Elections are held within departments and the results are communicated to the University Senate office by April 15th each year. If your unit has not held elections, please consider this service position.

Campus president-elect positions: These elections are executed by the University Senate Secretary. The winner of these campus based elections will become the campus president-elect and a member of the University Academic Council, which is the highest level service position available for faculty members here at ASU.

Campus grievance committee elections: grievance committee members are an important component of the ASU governance system. Elected grievance committee members serve on panels that hear grievance cases submitted by faculty members or academic professionals here at ASU.
